A sparrow is a small bird which is found throughout the world. They can be found almost everywhere where there are humans. There are many different species of sparrows. They are only about four to six inches in length. People appreciate their beautiful song. Sparrows prefer to build their small, yet well built nests using twigs, grass and plant fibres in low places - usually on the ground, low trees or in bushes. Female sparrows lay four to six eggs at a time.

The eggs are white with reddish brown spots and hatch within eleven to fourteen days. Both the male and female sparrows care for the young. Newly hatched sparrows are fed insects and worms. Adult sparrows mainly eat seeds and use their feet to scratch them. Sparrows bath in dust, water or snow. Unfortunately, sparrows have now become a disappearing species. Their numbers are declining across the natural range. Scientists and experts say that severe changes in the urban ecosystem in recent times have had a tremendous impact on the population of sparrows. Mobile tower radiation and excessive use of chemical fertilizers are aggravating the problem.
